Topic: Organizational Leadership: Improving Your Knowledge, Expertise, and Brand

Mac McGuire, PhD
Quality Texas Foundation
Regional Program
(TX, PR, MO, KS, LA)
Chief Executive Officer

Organizational Leadership: This new type of leadership requires us to love our people (people-oriented approach) and continually develop our charisma for the next generation of work post-Covid. This short seminar will delve into the latest research concerning the most often used leadership types/models and reveals the new way of thinking for those of us in leadership position. Come prepared to be challenged about your current beliefs. Dr. Mac will address the requirements to mission first, commitment to a set of standards, improve/boost morale, positive attitude, encourage teamwork, and become a part of the group from a distance (no buddy/boss syndrome). Additionally, communication, appropriate measures, vision of the future for everyone (succession planning), and perhaps the most important of all, how to conduct and be a part of courageous conversations.

Dr. Mac McGuire is an organizational behavior and leadership professional with over 56 years' experience in leadership positions. He has over 30 years of experience in the US Army achieving the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. He commanded a high priority company and two battalions, one combat support and the other academic. He was the Director of Training (Superintendent of Schools; civilian equivalent) to nine states for combat, combat support, and combat service support training. He is a former Adjunct Professor at the University of Texas in four different disciplines, the University of Mary Hardin Baylor MBA Program, and Southern Methodist University. Since October 2014, he has served as the Chief Executive Officer for the Quality Texas Foundation Regional Program and has led the program to explosive growth with over 50 months of sustainability.
