Topic: Ideation to Realization: Accelerating Mission with Artificial Intelligence

Mara Bryant
Operations Executive of Adventist
Health White Memorial

Steven Reilly
CEO and Co-Founder of Mednition

How do you transform visionary ideas into sustainable realities? This webinar, featuring Adventist Health White Memorial (AHWM), a 2019 Baldrige Award winner, in collaboration with Mednition, will highlight their journey in integrating and expanding the use of artificial intelligence to fulfill their organizational mission. The session will showcase how this partnership has set new healthcare quality and operational excellence standards. Utilizing an innovative framework, their joint efforts have significantly improved patient outcomes, enhanced workforce well-being and retention, and boosted financial performance.

Mara Bryant As Operations Executive, Mara Bryant leads out key initiatives integrating the Malcolm Baldrige business framework, strategic planning, and organizational performance. In 1999, she became Adventist Health's first national Malcolm Baldrige examiner in the healthcare category, which has helped White Memorial better understand and implement the Malcolm Baldrige criteria. Bryant has also set up an effective productivity standard to monitor staffing and help ensure correct nursing ratios. She also established the decision support function to provide comparative data, vital to strategic and operational planning.

Steven Reilly is the CEO and Co-founder of Mednition, an industry-leading artificial intelligence company that improves patient, staff, and hospital outcomes with clinician-first real-time clinical guidance and risk detection in Emergency Departments with KATE AI. Steven has a long history of developing and guiding key transformations within organizations in a career that began in the complex world of management consulting as well as later success as an entrepreneur before turning these skills to the healthcare sector.

Out of a deeply personal experience with his daughter in an emergency department, he used his professional expertise and unwavering commitment to transform healthcare, enacting change where it's needed to create a healthier and safer future for everyone. Mednition's team is mission-driven and passionate about impacting the lives of patients and healthcare professionals through meaningful advancements in real-time clinical risk detection, thereby supporting the best possible decisions for patients for over 2 million patients.
